Professor Sondhi and I had a further conversation with Ms. Tshudy on Wednesday, January 5th. Ms. Tshudy reiterated that she did not believe she violated the honor code because she did not intend to copy someone else's work, and therefore, she did not feel she should enter into an agreement to resolve the allegations.  Under Section 5.2, still on page 10, if in the absence of an agreement, the honor code administrator is obligated to meet with the honor	2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22	Proceedings consulted with honor committee chair on Thursday, January 6, and we concluded that probable cause exists to believe the honor code has been violated.  Therefore, under Section 5.3A of the honor code, honor committee chair appointed members of the hearing board, appointed Professor Butler as president, scheduled the time and place of hearing, notified Ms. Tshudy, and gave notice to Professor Gould as a witness.  Under Section 3.1A of the honor code, which is on page 8 if you want to turn to that. I provided all of the evidence I expect to present today to Ms. Tshudy. I recently became aware of a university provided program for detecting plagiarism called "Turnitin." I did not know about Turnitin. I used

You can almost sum this up as a key conclusion on both Ms. Tshudy's paper and Ms. Rogers' notes. You see the phrase, A viable alternative to patent protection. It's the penultimate line there. I mean, that's a major conclusion for both the paper and the note because, again, the strategy here, keying off the Momenta case in both papers, is the strategy is to rely on trade secret rather than patents.  And then the second part of both papers is to look at risks, potential risks. And so that's a big conclusion, to go through several areas of potential risk and then to come up with the conclusion that it's okay. In other words, it's a viable

DEAN WILLIAMS: Professor Butler, I have no more questions at this time, although I may have further questions after Ms. Tshudy and the hearing board question Professor Gould.  PROFESSOR BUTLER: All right. Let's turn next to Ms. Tshudy and ask if she has any questions for us.  MS. TSHUDY: And this is the only time that I was able to ask him questions; is that correct?  DEAN WILLIAMS: Yes, I believe so.	2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23	PROFESSOR GOULD - CROSS-EXAMINATION PROFESSOR BUTLER: That's right. MS. TSHUDY: Okay. PROFESSOR BUTLER: Do you have some questions? MS. TSHUDY: Yeah. PROFESSOR GOULD: Okay. CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MS. TSHUDY: Q On our meeting on October 15th, do you remember the corrections or critiques that you gave for my paper or for, like, my outline? A Mean, honestly, that far back, I don't remember a lot of detail. I seem to remember discussions of trade secrets and manufacturing processes, because that's where I see a lot of the discussion about. What I usually do with students on these calls is try to give some advice. Often students start having so many findings, so many issues and so many things to discuss. So I try and give some guidance when
